Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Over fishing and dumping of waste materials from ships are just two of the many abuses our oceans have suffered at our hands. As a person lucky enough to live near the Pacific I have seen the results of the disregard, abuse and ignorance of the beauty and life in our oceans, by the very interests that enjoy the oceans bounties. Please, do not lessen the protections already in place.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Our oceans are areas that need much further exploration. I believe that regulations on fishing and destruction of fish habitat should have been put in place long ago. We already know what is happening to the earth because of a lack of planning long ago. We did not just develop endangered species over night, it has been a long term problem that has been ignored way to long. Let's NOT let this happen to our oceans as well.

I realize that yes, jobs will be lost. I grew up in Aberdeen WA. It was both a fishing and logging community. I know that our logs were sent to Japan to be plained and made into lumber and then sent back to us at a much greater cost.

Something has to be done with the Bush administration to make them realize that ruining our old growth forests and the oceans and waterways will indeed produce jobs, but for what kind of future are these jobs going to produce.

Please help to preserve the National Marine Fisheries Service and the Office of Habitat Conservation to protect thes areas that we are obviously not interested in pertecting.

Thank you.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Our oceans, and the life they contain, are essential to a healthy environment. We must strengthen the protections on marine habitat. To allow pollution, overfishing, and habitat destruction to weaken the delicate marine ecosystems will prove to be detrimental to all of Earth's inhabitants.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

You are undoubtedly aware that fisheries off of California, as well as all over the world, have shown alarmingly declining yields. Further, in many areas, pollutants in water have caused deaths, wounds, and diseases in fish species.

These problems must be combatted and improved, rather than allowing any worsening of habitat conditions for fish.

Overfishing, destruction of habitat, and pollution from ship wastes must not be allowed to continue. The declining health of our oceans must be reversed, and marine ecosystems must be protected and improved.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

This request comes at a time when I am watching a program about the crabbing and oyster industries in Chesapeake Bay and the beating they are taking from pollution. We cannot continue to foul our waters. We cannot allow our legislators to cave in to big business when the result is the poisoning of our water and therefore the food we eat. Now it's tuna, and I have 6 grandchildren who love tuna sandwiches. We keep this up and nothing from the sea will be edible. Alarmist? No, I don't think so. Forty years ago I probably wouldn't have had to write this letter. What will we not be able to eat 40 years from now if we don't stop polluting the oceans? Please do something, anything, to save our oceans and marine life.

Sincerely,
Dean Cobb

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

In fact, I urge you to go beyond that and promote restoring fish populations. About 25 years ago I had the opportunity to speak to Pete Wilson when he was mayor here in San Diego. Even then there was widespread concern about the plundering of fish of all kinds in our ocean. I suggested to him that with all the "high-powered", "high-tech" marine science here, in the immediate San Diego area atleast, production of young fish species would not seem to be an overly difficult task. All fishing boats could then be required to carry tanks full of them outbound for deposit in the ocean before starting their catches. To me this sounds about as analgous as you could get to lumber and pulp and paper companies reforesting areas where they cut down trees by replanting; they have known for decades that they have to do this or in future they won't have any trees to cut down.

Evidently, the mayor wasn't in a position to do much in that direction, but I believe the idea still has merit. Indeed, it may be an only way to prevent extinction of many species and really messing up the natural order.

We need to swing our environmental pendulum in the opposite direction in order to balance the damage we have already done to our oceans--and to our planet. If anything, we need to strengthen (and certainly not weaken) our protection of our oceans, and to take care that we interact with them in a way that contributes to their enhancement. Doing so will truly serve our own best interests, as well.

The failure of the federal government to effectively implement the Endangered Species Act has contributed to the extinction of at least 114 species since the law was passed in 1973, says a new report by the Center for Biological Diversity, an environmental advocacy organization based in Arizona. "If extinction is the ultimate criteria by which to judge agency implementation of the ESA, the failure has been spectacular," the report finds.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

As a new Californian (26 years) I've felt blessed being able to bring my children up on the shores of perhaps the most wonderous and endless marine environment in the world.

Selfishly, I want my grandchildren (3 1/2 years, and -2 months) to be able to enjoy the same wonder and joy of discovery. Sadly, however, I fear that that will not be the case.

But more important than what I want for my grandchildren is the realization that the reckless, profit-seeking policies which govern politics and business are creating an irreversable imbalance which threatens the future for ALL our offspring.

Please Mr. Schmitten, use your good offices in the Office of Habitat Conservation, to insure the future of balanced habitat for all species. As with the evolution of mankind, once again this must begin with the Sea.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Our oceans are not as well off as most people think. The ocean is only a never ending supply of food only if we practice sustainable harvest. We must also continue to protect our coral reefs. Coral reefs are essential habitat for many fish that we consume.

Thank you for your time.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

The good health of the oceans and the life in the oceans is critical to the good health of everyone on the planet. The latest report on the state of the oceans should be a clear sign to you and all the rest of us that more serious protection is required, not less, and that it needs to be done sooner, not later. The calls for fewer regulations on fishing, oil exploration, and other human actions relative to the oceans are short-sighted, greedy, and dangerous. Please reject them.

Keep to a policy of protecting the integrity of ocean ecosystems from human ill-treatment for all time.

Sincerely,
Carol Ampel

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Ocean habitats, which include coral, sea grasses, sandy bottoms and rocks, all provide fish with the food, shelter, spawning areas and nursing grounds that are essential to their continued survival. The various habitats that are essential to fish survival are collectively called essential fish habitat.

California's ocean no longer sustains as much life as it used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and cruise ship pollution have all led to an alarming decline in the health of our oceans, where marine life and delicate ecosystems are threatened.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Keeping our oceans' ecosystems healthy is a vital piece of the survival of all species on the planet. To this end the existing protections written into the Magnuson-Stevens Act are very important, and should rather be strengthened--certainly not decreased. Please protect these protections.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Overfishing and failure to regulate practices such as longline fishing and trawling has devastated many stocks of fish to a point of unsustainability - examples of Atlantic cod and bluefin tuna are among the most obvious. Damage to the ocean floor, and bycatch are important problems that make fishing extremely wasteful.

Stewardship of the oceans, and control over fishing practices, are essential if the oceans are not to be depleted by unsustainable practices.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The quality of our oceans has been degraded at an alarming rate. Pregnant women and children can no longer eat fish safely due to toxic substances. Please respect our oceans and fisheries for succeeding generations by maintaining existing standards.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Oceans around the world are in decline, with declining fish stocks due to inadequate environmental protections and overfishing. Here in California, our coastline and the waters offshore are among our most precious natural resources. We must strengthen existing protections, not weaken them!!

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Run-off chemical discharge, pollution from industry, oil spills and destruction of some of the wetlands which filter water before it reaches the oceans have all been detrimental. Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

If we don't start protecting our oceans, who will? They are becoming a trash bin for many localities. We love our ocean and its beaches and try to clean up after ourselves and others.

Sincerely,

I understand that you are asking for public comment on potential changes to the Magnuson-Stevens Act which the Bush administration is recommending.

After visiting your web site, I am encouraged by the attitude you are taking towards any changes to existing policies.

I would like to suggest that you carefully consider any changes to the act that might weaken the protection of existing essential fish habitats. I would like to see the successes of the past continue.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. As the world population continues to skyrocket we must not simultaneously poison our oceans. These once plentiful resources are already endangered by over-fishing and pollution. Please protect remaining habitat. Once it is gone we will not get it back. Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. It is clear that once this set of ecosystems is damaged, the quality of life of every person is significantly damaged. As true with every generation, the current generation must choose its legacy. We can either leave the ocean in extreme peril, or we can protect it from further destruction, saving it for our children and their children, and also setting an example to them of the benefits of protecting the natural world. The ocean is not ours to do with as we please, it belongs to future generations; we are merely caretakers.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Because there has been so much overfishing, destruction of habitat from areas such as the 'dead zones' which occur when animal waste or fertilizer is poured into the oceans via streams, and a dire lack of oversight of such practices, I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

We humans (as well as other species) depend on the oceans for our wellbeing and for the overall balance of the planet. We need to protect them and put even stricter guidelines for such protection in place.

The oceans are becoming dangerously polluted, endangering countless marine species. And there are virtually no regulations stopping short-sighted industries from continuing this behavior. As each day passes we continue to disregard the devastation, destruction and depletion of our natural resources.

Big business, special interests and inadequate education continue to take their toll on our fragile ecosystems. These systems are the basis of all life. I'm not a "tree hugger" but responsibility must be taken by our legislative bodies to act to conserve and preserve.

Being wealthy will not guarantee anyone refuge from the life threatening effects of dangerous pollutants.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. In this world of over 6 billion people and with the world's 2 most voracious nations basically refusing to even try to stop the gluttony, obviously any person or agent with any power to do so must make a maximum effort to extend whatever possible protections to a resource that is ever more important to the human and non-human populations of this planet, not to mention the basic right to exist of the individual organisms and species with which we share this little rock.

Extending further protection to the oceans and their natural inhabitants would also distance you somewhat from the eco-terrorists who currently control the White House. I certainly hope that at the time of my own death, people will at least partially remember me as a person who fought against the likes of Ronald Reagan, James Watt, George W. Bush, Dick Cheney, Tom Delay, and other mega-ghouls. Make your own legacy memorable by doing what's right. Protect our oceans as much as possible.

Thank you.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Please keep NMFS fish protection laws strong and intact!

Commercial fishing operations will not be satisfied until every marketable form of aquatic life has been "harvested" (ripped) from the sea. Yet we need not take a single fish. As a vegan, I know that the healthiest and most environmental diet for humans requires no animal products.

I am interested in fish from both a health and economic perspective. After studying the matter in some detail, I am alarmed at the serious decline in our oceans' wildlife. I believe the only responsible and moral course of action at this point in history is to ban all fishing completely.

We don't need fish to be healthy. In fact, animal protein is behind the extremely high and increasing rates of cancer, stroke, cardiovascular disease and other maladies in industrialized countries. Switching to a vegan diet would allow fish stocks to recover, while also greatly improving the health of our nation's people.

Unfortunately, we continue to kill billions of sea creatures every year, trying to fill our insatiable need for the animal protein and fat that is killing us. As a result, our nation's ocean fish populations are under tremendous stress.

The only hope we have of allowing marine wildlife populations to recover is to ban all fishing. The ban should remain in place until a commission of scientists in the field agree that it is safe to resume. Even then, fishing should only be allowed for local needs, not for export or profit.

At the very least, please do not weaken existing fish conservation legislation.

Thank you for considering my opinion. Please let me know how you intend to address this urgent matter. I would prefer an electronic reply, so as to conserve paper.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines, or other protective measures that keep our oceans from becoming nothing more than lifeless waste dumps. The oceans affect much more than their own waters; changes in the oceans and their inhabitants create potentially devastating changes especially to coastal cities and those who live within them. Please protect our oceans!

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

As you know, California's ocean no longer sustains as much life as it used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and cruise ship pollution have all led to an alarming decline in the health of our oceans, where marine life and delicate ecosystems are threatened.

Hope you will do the right thing and not weaken existing protective guidelines.

Thank you,
Ken and Beth Giannotti

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

As an avid SCUBA diver, I am extremely fond of the beauty inherent in our oceans and extremely appalled when such a delicate habitat is destroyed. The oceans and the life within them are essential to our existence. With the current ongoing destruction of ocean habitats, we will have no marine life left to inspire and sustain future generations. Please do not make this situation worse than it already is.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

As with our forests, we can do the damage much faster than the resource can recover from the damage. This is a good reason to err on the side of caution. Just a few years of over-fishing or severe pollution can reduce stocks to a level that might take decades to recover, causing a far greater impact on humanity's ability to feed ourselves than much smaller cutbacks today would generate.

This isn't tree-hugging (or fish-hugging); it's about wanting my daughter and any grandchildren I might have to be able to enjoy the same delicious seafood that I do.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

The request to comment on whether to protect essential fish habitat comes out at the same time that amazingly a republican committee released a study on April 21, 2004, from which the NY Times stated, "The first major federal assessment of the oceans in a generation endorsed on Tuesday the gloomy scientific view of the nation's deteriorating coastal waters and offered a mosaic of 250 recommendations to reverse the decline, including a call for local and international action to curb the overfishing that has depleted fish stocks worldwide."

What a waste of taxpayer money to go into this again. Even a few republicans can figure this out.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I understand the National Marine Fisheries Service is asking the public to comment on whether to protect essential fish habitat.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

What human beings have done and are doing to the oceans is so very sad and almost beyond belief. We have taken an almost limitless and renewable resource and come too close to using it up and making it no longer renewable. We must protect our oceans and strengthen protections of essential fish habitat. You have an important job; don't let the world down.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. We are only now beginning to understand the integral part of the whole that the oceans play. In fact, I believe they have served for a long time to absorb the ways we have misused the land but their capacity is not unlimited and we must not run this resource into the ground the way we have done others. It is vital that we preserve the integrity of our oceans. We must enact protections as well as begin to remediate the damage already done.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

As a relative newcomer to California and former landlubber, (I've lived here 6 years), I am awed and amazed by the beauty of our coastlines and Pacific Ocean.

Often, when I walk on our Northern California beaches, it distresses me to see the trash that washes up on the shore. I always try to bring along a bag, leaving the beach cleaner than I found it.

I am doing my small part to help protect this awesome treasure. I ask you to do yours, and protect our essential fish habitat for today's and future generations. The ocean is a vital part of our history and economy, and must be protected!

It is unbelievable that with the recent report from the Ocean Commission the Administration is considering any weakening of provisions to protect ocean fisheries and the overall health of oceans. We should be doing much more, but certainly no less, to protect the ocean.

Please take action immediately to protect essential fish habitat.
